SUBJECT:

Presidential Review Memorandum 11

- b. ICS Memorandum 77-2122, dated
1 March 1977, Subject: PRM 11

In our conversation last week you asked for a checklist or an outline of topics which being of particular interest to the Directorate of Operations, would probably figure in any full dress review of foreign intelligence activities and the organizational structure and function of the Intelligence Community. Here is a very preliminary outline which deals less with "topics" than with comparatively broad areas of interest. Most of these bear on Part II of Presidential Memorandum 11.

- a. Re your Draft Outline Introduction, the third and fourth questions -- what the country seems to want out of intelligence management and the need to balance DCI responsibilities and authorities -- bear directly and indirectly on the question of a charter for intelligence collection and covert action operations. There are arguments pro and con and although there is no official Directorate position as yet, the DO would naturally seek to weigh in on any discussions related to the subject.

b. Re your Draft Outline Section on Community Management, most of the topics noted are of great interest to us, particularly those dealing with requirements, tasking and operational controls; determination of consumer needs and priorities; intelligence related activities; and evaluation of performance. Our approach to most of them would be geared to consideration of the institutional relations between the DCI and CIA on the one hand, and

1. The Department of Defense -- with focus on cover for personnel and coordination of military intelligence operations;

2. The Department of State -- a very complex issue which is currently under full fledged review between the Agency and the Department. The basic issue devolves on the authority of Ambassadors over our overseas operations.

c. Under Part III of Presidential Memorandum 11, analysis is called for of national counterintelligence policies and coordinating mechanisms. The Directorate has established positions on this subject which should be considered in any Community-wide deliberation.

To DDO:

After receiving ref B from [ ] last week I discussed the matter with [ ] and he asked for some preliminary input along these lines. To put it somewhat differently, these are the lines along which, based on his remarks, it strikes me that the Directorate would wish to weigh in. I would appreciate any further advice or instructions you may wish to impart.
